Liberal Sport, Fit Females

October 24 – 26, 2006 (Beijing, China)

Host by the Research Centre for Gender, Sport and Society of Peking University

1. Introduction

The First International Forum on Women, Sport and Culture in November, 2005 was highly commented domestically and internationally with massive media coverage by CCTV, China Woman's Daily and many others. The issues of women, fitness, and sports have attracted more and more attention and academic, business and sports communities have shown great enthusiasm. Given the existing stereotypes and customs that inhibit women from realizing their potential in fitness and sport, the following questions have been raised recently:

How should women live a healthy, cheerful and graceful life in the 21st century?

What barriers stop women from taking part in fitness and sport, and how to tackle them?

What popular sports activities are there in different countries and how to plan and manage them?

What impact will the 2008 Olympic Games have on Chinese society, culture and economy?

What part will women play in preparing and organizing the Olympic Games?

How to develop women's leadership through sports?

The Second International Forum on Women, Sport and Culture will provide scholars, experts, practitioners and sports fans with a platform to discuss the above issues in order to raise women's awareness of sport and fitness, to promote quality research on women and sports culture, and build a bridge for cultural exchanges between China and other nations.
